Open Committee's Files

To the Editor:

As a former staff member of the House Select Committee on Assassinations, I am convinced that the American public deserves to know what is inside that committee's files.

Those of us who worked on the sealed portions of the committee's report are under oath not to speak about their contents. But the recent burst of publicity surrounding the release of the Oliver Stone film "J.F.K." has underscored once again the need for full disclosure of this material. The reports could be released with the names expurgated, thus eliminating any damage, embarrassment or humiliation to those named.
